E'town teen arrested in connection to area fires

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

Elizabethtown police arrested an 18-year-old woman Wednesday morning suspected of starting eight fires since March 25 throughout downtown.

Rachel Dembek of Elizabethtown was arrested early Wednesday and charged with one count each of second- and third-degree arson. The charges stem from fires set Tuesday night and Wednesday morning, police said.

DEMBEK

Rusty Todd, fire investigator with Elizabethtown Fire Department, said an Elizabethtown police officer saw Dembek attempt to ignite a fire at a 105 Davis Drive residence. Additional police and firefighters responded at 12:49 a.m.

In addition to the Davis Drive fire, police and firefighters responded at 9:45 p.m. Tuesday to fires in trash receptacles in the area of 215 and 217 S. Main St. near Hall's Supply & Tool Repair — the location of an earlier fire.

Todd said the flames and damage largely were confined to the trash receptacles with the exterior paint of one building collecting some soot.

During interviews with police, Dembek allegedly admitted to starting the most recent fires and several others over the last several weeks, according to an EPD news release.

Investigators believe the teen is responsible for eight fires, Todd said, most of them confined to trash cans and receptacles.

However, an April 8 fire at Hall's Supply started in a trash receptacle behind the 215 S. Main St. business and spread to the back of the building near the electrical services, Todd said. The damage is estimated at $40,000 to $50,000.

That amount does not include smoke damage, he said, which investigators still are trying to calculate.

The cost to replace a trash receptacle can be

D.A.R.E. to make a difference

Classes encourage students, parents to communicate

By SARAH BENNETT

Over the last several weeks, area fifth-grade students have graduated from local D.A.R.E. classes, a nationwide anti-drug program that has educated students in Hardin County for more than 20 years.

Virgil Willoughby, public information officer for Elizabethtown Police Department, has taught local D.A.R.E.

classes for about eight years. The program, which stands for Drug Abuse Resistance Education, not only is to educate students about the harmful effects of drug use, he said, but also is about encouraging discussion, especially between students and their families.

"It opens the doors of communication between the student and police, the student and the teacher, but most importantly between the student and the parents," he said.

The D.A.R.E. program started in 1983 in Los Angeles. In 1989, the first training class was held in Kentucky, Willoughby said. Former EPD Deputy Chief Jack Harris taught the first class in Elizabethtown in 1990.

Today, the program is taught in elementary schools throughout Hardin County with Officer Bryce Shumate teaching classes in Radcliff, Willoughby and Sgt. Tim Cleary teaching classes in Elizabethtown, and Hardin County Sheriff's Deputy Bud Baumgardner teaching classes in county schools and in West Point.

Willoughby said Cleary also teaches D.A.R.E. classes in Elizabethtown middle schools and began instructing a high school program last year.

Wednesday, Shumate graduated a fifth-grade class at New Highland Elementary. The students learned about legal drugs such as tobacco, alcohol and prescription medicine as well as illegal substances such as marijuana, he said.

Teen flees police

Wallace led officers on multi-county chase in stolen car, authorities say

By JENNIFER CORBETT
Kentucky Standard

A multi-county vehicle pursuit ended with a dog dragging a man by his shorts out of a vehicle Monday afternoon on Plum Run Road in Bardstown.

According to police reports, Aaron Wallace, 18, of Rineyville carjacked a Ford Escape from a woman at a Louisville Meijer off Hurstbourne Lane. Wallace allegedly threw the woman on the ground and drove away in her vehicle.

Police pursued Wallace in Louisville, through Bullitt County, along Louisville Road and finally to Plum Run Road off U.S. 31E in Nelson County.

Bardstown Police Chief Rick McCubbin said spikes were deployed on Louisville Road near Nazareth Farm Subdivision and in the front entrance to the Sisters of Charity of Nazareth. Wallace ran over both sets of spikes.

After running over the spikes, Wallace continued driving until the SUV stopped on Plum Run Road with four flat tires.

During the pursuit, Wallace allegedly damaged a Bardstown Police car by striking the front of the vehicle.

McCubbin said he was OK with the damage to the police car, as long as Wallace didn't make it into town.

"We were determined not to let (the driver) get past Old Delaney's," McCubbin said.

As the Ford Escape stopped on Plum Run Road, officers surrounded the vehicle and waited for Wallace to emerge.

According to a Nelson County Sheriff's Department citation, Wallace refused to comply with verbal commands and a Taser was deployed.

During this time, Wallace still reportedly resisted arrest. A Jefferson County canine unit was then released. The dog bit Wallace on the leg and dragged him out of the car.

Once Wallace was on the ground, officers arrested him. Nelson County EMS was called to the scene and transported Wallace to Flaget Memorial Hospital to treat lacerations he received from the dog's bite.

Officers from Nelson County Sheriff's Department, Bardstown Police, Mount Washington Police Department, Bullitt County Sheriff's Department, Louisville Metro Police and Kentucky State Police participated in the pursuit.

Wallace is lodged in Louisville Metro Corrections on charges of robbery, fleeing or evading police, three counts of wanton endangerment, reckless driving and resisting arrest. He is being held in lieu of two $10,000 cash bonds.

McCubbin plans to seek restitution for the damaged police car and could add wanton endangerment to the charges.

Flashing signs on East Dixie Avenue warn motorists about upcoming restriping and lane changes for Dixie Avenue through downtown Elizabethtown.

Dixie earns its stripes

Repainting, lane changes pending on U.S. 31W

By MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

Motorists will notice significant lane changes and intermittent traffic delays Saturday on U.S. 31W in Elizabethtown between Public Square and St. John Road.

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet District 4 Office plans to restripe the corridor as part of its road diet plan, which will reconfigure lanes around the square and reshape the four lanes north of the square to one northbound and one southbound lane with a center turning lane. Lane closures are expected during restriping, which should be finished by the end of the day.

Chris Jessie, a public information officer with the transportation cabinet office in Elizabethtown, said work is set to begin early Saturday morning. Crews will pressure blast old striping off so they can lay down new striping. Jessie said he was unsure from which direction crews will start their work.

Changes on the square will force motorists driving north to move into the left lane, if they want to continue north on U.S. 31W, or drive around the square onto South Main Street because the right lane becomes a mandatory turn lane onto North Main Street under the new configuration.

Meanwhile, southbound traffic approaching St. John Road will meet a right-turn-only lane and a left lane for through traffic, Jessie said.

Drivers will have to make adjustments in their commutes and driving habits, which is expected because the configuration has been in place for years, Jessie said.

The new look of U.S. 31W through the corridor has been proposed by the state to make driving safer by widening lanes, offering better spacing between vehicles and better visibility for left-turning drivers, according to a news release.

It also is expected to reduce side-swipe and angled collisions, create better traffic flow and offer safer routes to businesses on the roadway. Installation of new signs, rumble strips and signal timing devices is included as part of the project, according to the news release.

Patty Dunaway, chief district engineer, has said restriping the road now will help the state identify problems with the reconfiguration before the stretch is resurfaced this summer.

Jessie said the state does not have a definitive starting date yet for the resurfacing work.

"All I can say is it will be after school ends and will be finished before the next (school year) begins," he said. "That's our window."

The state has placed mobile message boards on the north and southbound approaches to the corridor alerting drivers to the impending changes.

DAILY BRIEFING

RADCLIFF

City Council to mull alcohol policies

Radcliff City Council plans to hold a special work session soon to hash out the city's policy regarding alcohol use at Colvin Community Center and city parks.

Councilman Don Yates said Tuesday night he has been approached by several residents inquiring about the policy. He told the council he cannot provide answers because no comprehensive policy is in place. Council members agreed a policy is needed and City Clerk Ashley Russo said she will contact council members individually to determine a date for the special meeting.

The council on Tuesday also approved purchase of a replacement copier for the recreation department for $3,375 and approved $4,200 to repair a crack in the children's pool at Colvin Community Center and repaint the pool. The recreation department's budget will be amended at a later date if needed to reflect the expenses.

Mayor J.J. Duvall also recognized Willie & Mel's Tire Pros, a local business in Radcliff, for donating wheels and tires to the city's Drug Abuse Resistance Education vehicle.

LARUE COUNTY

Bail reduced in burglary homicide case

A circuit judge approved a significant bond reduction Monday for Samantha J. Kolley, an Elizabethtown woman reportedly seen fleeing the scene of a burglary and homicide Dec. 30 in Buffalo.

Kolley, 19, was indicted earlier this year for multiple Class C and Class D felonies, including theft by unlawful taking — auto, second-degree burglary, receiving stolen property and first-degree hindering prosecution or apprehension.

Upon indictment, a warrant was issued for Kolley's arrest and bond was set at $200,000 cash by Judge David Seay. On Monday, Seay lowered it to $15,000 cash, LaRue Circuit Clerk Larry Bell said.

Kolley remained Wednesday in the LaRue County Detention Center.

The bond for Abdullah R. White, Kolley's co-defendant, remains at $2 million cash. According to police, White asphyxiated the victim, Kristie L. Allen, before fleeing the scene with Kolley in Allen's vehicle.

National cable show tapes in Leitchfield

'Toddlers & Tiaras' to feature area family

By BEN SHEROAN
bsheroan@thenewsenterprise.com

Huddled in their daughter's bright pink bedroom, Matt Stasel and Jessica Grant discuss their 19-month-old and her collection of tiaras, trophies, ribbons, sashes and glamour photos.

In the meantime, their living room is a buzz of activity as a broadcast team arranges lights and cameras for an interview.

Kendyl Stasel's success on the pageant circuit attracted the attention of "Toddlers & Tiaras," the cable program that's been known to spotlight and sometimes embarrass parents of tiny runway stars. A film crew spent all day Thursday and Friday morning recording at the family's home in Leitchfield.

While lights were being adjusted in the living room for her final interview, Jessica Grant acknowledged that the show sometimes presents pageant parents in less than favorable terms.

"We're just trying to stay positive so they won't have anything to twist," she said.

Kendyl's first stage appearance was a baby contest held in conjunction with Leitchfield's Hometown Christmas celebration.

"She started doing good and winning," her mother said.

"We knew how pretty she was," her father recalls. "We had to do something."

The family has lost count of her pageant performances. It's somewhere between 25 and 30.

During one of those events, the family was approached by a representative of "Toddlers & Tiaras" and the conversations led to a program that's expected to air sometime this fall on TLC.

The pageant outings make demands on the entire family including time, patience, makeup, clothing "and a little money to throw away," said Matt Stasel, who works for a family business in Bonnieville and operates a tattoo parlor from his home.

He met Jessica while both were attending Western Kentucky University and the couple has been together three years. She works as a waitress at Farmers Feed Mill and is studying health care management at Elizabethtown Community and Technical College.

During the TV crew's visit last week, the family's white frame, rental house was transformed. Heavy shades were placed on the outside of windows so sunlight would not interfere with the settings. A decorative aquarium and other noisy devices had to be disabled. Stasel even pulled the batteries from a clock so the ticking would not interfere with microphones.

The guests showed up in a minivan with a rental truck carrying their array of lights, cords, microphones and cameras.

As quickly as the final interview wrapped, the crew and the family both started packing to leave.

The five-member production team headed home and the family was headed to Lexington for another weekend pageant appearance in which Kendyl took third in the novice supreme category.

"Which is unheard of for her age," her mother said in a text message.

Man arrested in WKU players shooting

By DEBORAH HIGHLAND
The Daily News

Police arrested a Bowling Green man Tuesday in the Sunday morning shootings of two Western Kentucky University football players.

Bowling Green Police Department detectives arrested Travis J. Fant, 22, of Countryside Drive. Fant is charged with two counts of first-degree assault, one count of receiving stolen property-firearm and one count of tampering with physical evidence, Warren County Commonwealth's Attorney Chris Cohron said.

The firearm related to these charges was reported stolen outside of Warren County, Cohron said.

Defensive lineman Tevin Holliman, 21, and defensive back Ricardo Singh, 20, each suffered a single gunshot wound early Sunday in a parking lot outside the Lava Lounge, BGPD spokesman Officer Ronnie Ward said.

The two men appeared to have been shot in the parking lot of the building, which is at Russellville and Morgantown roads.

However, they were both gone when police pulled in, Ward said. Police found blood in the parking lot.

Beshear uses line-item veto power on road budget

Multiple projects in Williams' district stricken from budget

By ROGER ALFORD
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT — Democratic Gov. Steve Beshear signed off a $4.5 billion road construction plan Wednesday after using his line-item veto power to remove nearly $50 million in projects slated for a largely rural district represented by his chief Republican rival, Senate President David Williams.

"Our review of the road plan legislation over the last few days revealed that Sen. Williams took extraordinary steps to enrich his district at the expense of other priority projects in the state," Beshear said in a statement.

Beshear's action on the road plan could clear the way for lawmakers to pass a transportation budget this week and wrap up a special legislative session that is costing taxpayers more than $60,000 a day.

The second-term governor has aimed sharp criticism at Williams in recent days, charging that his unwillingness to pass a transportation budget in the closing days of a regular session that ended last week led to the special session that has cost $180,000 so far.

Williams, who ran unsuccessfully against Beshear for governor last year, didn't immediately respond to the vetoes or the criticism. Williams has said in recent days Beshear's line-item veto power is reserved for budget measures only and that the road plan isn't a budget measure.

Earlier Wednesday, the House passed a transportation budget that would fund the road construction plan.

Vetoed by the governor were 10 projects in Williams' district ranging in cost from $777,000 to $11.5 million.

"Sen. Williams has essentially moved all his district's road projects to the front of the line, forcing other projects that the Transportation Cabinet and other legislators considered high-priority to wait until additional funding becomes available," Beshear said. "It's unfair to the citizens, and it's unfair to the rest of the lawmakers whose districts will suffer."

Earlier Wednesday, the House passed a transportation budget that would fund the road construction plan, which includes widening to six lanes a dangerous stretch of Interstate 65 where 11 people died in a crash two years ago.

That massive spending plan also includes money for expanding airports, dredging river ports and building bridges.

America's New Year's host Dick Clark dead at 82

By LYNN ELBER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES – Dick Clark, the ever-youthful television host and tireless entrepreneur who helped bring rock 'n' roll into the mainstream on "American Bandstand," and later produced and hosted a vast range of programming from game shows to the New Year's Eve countdown from Times Square, has died. He was 82.

Clark had continued performing even after he suffered a stroke in 2004 that affected his ability to speak and walk.

Ryan Seacrest, who took over main hosting duties on the countdown show from Clark, said in a statement Wednesday that he was "deeply saddened."

"I idolized him from the start, and I was graced early on in my career with his generous advice and counsel," Seacrest said. "He was a remarkable host and businessman and left a rich legacy to television audiences around the world. We will all miss him."

Long dubbed "the world's oldest teenager" because of his boyish appearance, Clark bridged the rebellious new music scene and traditional show business, and equally comfortable whether chatting about music with Sam Cooke or bantering with Ed McMahon about TV bloopers. He thrived as the founder of Dick Clark Productions, supplying movies, game and music shows, beauty contests and more to TV. Among his credits: "The $25,000 Pyramid," "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes" and the American Music Awards.

For a time in the 1980s, he had shows on all three networks and was listed among the Forbes 400 of wealthiest Americans. Clark also was part of radio as partner in the United Stations Radio Network, which provided programs – including Clark's – to thousands of stations.

"There's hardly any segment of the population that doesn't see what I do," Clark told The Associated Press in a 1985 interview. "It can be embarrassing. People come up to me and say, 'I love your show,' and I have no idea which one they're talking about."

The original "American Bandstand" was one of network TV's longest-running series as part of ABC's daytime lineup from 1957 to 1987. It later aired for a year in syndication and briefly on the USA Network. Over the years, it introduced stars ranging from Buddy Holly to Madonna. The show's status as an American cultural institution was solidified when Clark donated Bandstand's original podium and backdrop to the Smithsonian Institution.

Clark joined "Bandstand" in 1956 after Bob Horn, who'd been the host since its 1952 debut, was fired. Under Clark's guidance, it went from a local Philadelphia show to a national phenomenon.

"I played records, the kids danced, and America watched," was how Clark once described the series' simplicity. In his 1958 hit "Sweet Little Sixteen," Chuck Berry sang that "they'll be rocking on Bandstand, Philadelphia, P-A."

As a host, Clark had the smooth delivery of a seasoned radio announcer. As a producer, he had an ear for a hit record. He also knew how to make wary adults welcome the odd new breed of music in their homes.

Prescription drug bill passes House

By ROGER ALFORD
The Associated Press

FRANKFORT – Investigators would be able to easily identify and charge unscrupulous doctors who overprescribe painkillers and anti-anxiety drugs under legislation passed by the House on Wednesday.

The measure was a top priority for Gov. Steve Beshear that he included in a call for a special session that began on Monday.

Within three days of convening, the Democratic-controlled House passed the measure 70-28. It now goes to the Republican-led Senate, where it is expected to undergo significant revisions.

State Rep. John Tilley, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said prescription drug abuse has reached epidemic proportions in Kentucky, where more people are dying from overdoses than from car wrecks – nearly 1,000 per year.

"We know that we will lose three people today, and, every day that we won't act, we'll lose three more people to prescription overdose deaths," Tilley told fellow lawmakers Wednesday.

The measure would require all physicians to tap into the state's prescription monitoring system to determine if patients seeking painkillers or anti-anxiety drugs have recently gotten similar medications from other doctors. Investigators from the attorney general's office also would monitor the prescribing practices of doctors, allowing quick investigations into questionable behavior.

The Kentucky Medical Association opposes the House measure, citing the "broad and overarching authority" given to the attorney general to gain access to what members believe should be private medical information.

Army denies clemency in 2010 'thrill kill' case

By GENE JOHNSON
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Army has denied early release for a soldier who tried to blow the whistle on a plot to kill Afghan civilians in 2010, only to later be convicted in the plot himself.

The clemency bid by former Spc. Adam Winfield of Cape Coral, Fla., was denied early this month despite the recommendation of a prosecutor who said Winfield deserved credit for trying to stop the killings.

Winfield was one of four Washington state-based soldiers convicted in the deaths of three Afghans. When Winfield learned of the first killing, he sent Facebook messages home to his father, who reported the matter to Joint Base Lewis-McChord.

The Army took no action until months later, after two more civilians had been killed. Winfield said he was pressured to participate in the third killing. He was convicted of involuntary manslaughter and sentenced to three years.

NEWLY REVEALED GRUESOME MILITARY PHOTOS: PANETTA APOLOGIZES, CONCERNED ABOUT VIOLENT REACTION. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta apologized Wednesday for gruesome, newly revealed photographs that purport to show U.S. soldiers posing with the bloodied remains of dead insurgents in Afghanistan two years ago. He said war can lead young troops to “foolish decisions” and expressed concern the photos could incite fresh violence against Americans.

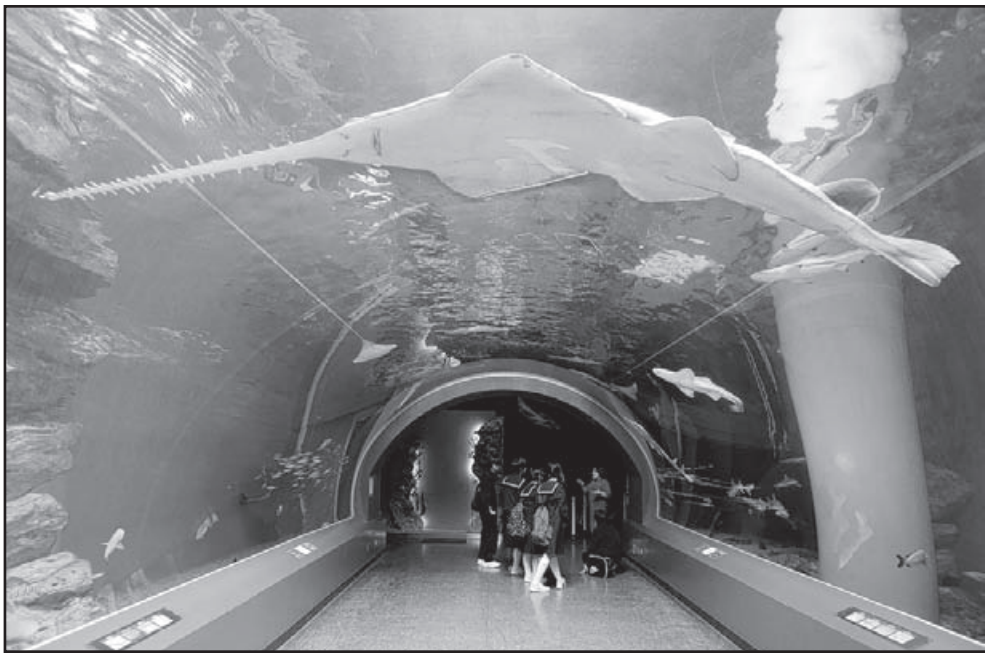

The White House called the photos “reprehensible,” joining Panetta and other top military officials in expressing regret for the latest in a string of embarrassing missteps by the U.S. military in a war that’s built on earning the trust and confidence of ordinary Afghans. In recent months, American troops have been caught up in controversies over burning Muslim holy books, urinating on Afghan corpses, an alleged massacre of 17 Afghan villagers and other misdeeds.

“This is war. I know that war is ugly and it’s violent, and I know that young people sometimes caught up in the moment make some very foolish decisions,” Panetta said. “I am not excusing that behavior, but neither do I want these images to bring further injury to our people or to our relationship with the Afghan people.”

“My apology is on behalf of the Department of Defense and the U.S. government,” Panetta told a news conference in Brussels following a meeting of NATO allies at which the way ahead in Afghanistan was the central topic.

The photos were published in Wednesday’s Los Angeles Times. One shows members of the 82nd

U.N. MONITORS FLEE SYRIAN DEMONSTRATION AFTER SECURITY FORCES OPEN

FIRE ON PROTESTERS. Syrian security forces opened fire Wednesday on anti-regime demonstrators surrounding the cars of a U.N. team meant to monitor a shaky cease-fire, sending the observers speeding off and protesters dashing for cover, according to activists and amateur videos.

The fresh violence in a suburb of Damascus, the Syrian capital, provided the first public glimpse of the work of the small team struggling to reinforce the international community’s stumbling efforts to end 13 months of deadly conflict in Syria.

The shooting, which wounded at least eight people, could also complicate the deployment of a larger U.N. mission to help a cease-fire take hold between President Bashar Assad’s forces and opposition fighters.

The difficulties of the team’s mission was clear Wednesday during its visit to the suburb of Arbeen, just northeast of Damascus. — AP

New York subway plotters wanted to ‘weaken America’

By TOM HAYS
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — An admitted al-Qaida recruit testified Wednesday he and two friends were determined to “weaken America” by strapping on bombs and attacking New York City subways around the eighth anniversary of 9/11, but now hopes for redemption.

“I believe my crimes are very bad,” Najibullah Zazi said on cross-examination. “If God gave me a second chance, I would appreciate it and will be a very good human being.”

Earlier, Zazi told a federal jury at his alleged accomplice’s trial that he slipped detonator ingredients into the city on Sept. 10, 2009, after the chemicals extracted from beauty supplies passed a test run.

Using code words, he then frantically emailed one of his al-Qaida handlers to get the exact formula for building homemade bombs to go with detonators.

“The marriage is ready,” Zazi wrote — signaling that he and two of his radicalized former high school classmates from Queens were ready to die as martyrs.

A painting class at Elizabethtown Community and Technical College conducts a critique of recent assignments. The class includes students enrolled through the college's Lifelong Learners program, which allows those 65 and older to take classes for free.

College comes free to lifelong learners

ISSUE: ECTC's Lifelong Learning

OUR VIEW: Take advantage of free studies

Some might suggest that college is wasted on the young.

Many high school graduates, who remember little in life except going to school, don't always appreciate the wonderful gift of higher education. It's four years or more of broadening your horizons, expanding your mind and searching for truth.

And, for most, it's a four-year delay to the pressures of employment, making a mortgage payment and getting on with life.

It's not surprising that senior citizens and high school seniors have a different view of college's value.

Elizabethtown Community and Technical College provides one of the true benefits of aging with its Lifelong Learners program. It allows people 65 or older to take classes for free.

More than 50 are enrolled and Jim Murley, the program's adviser, is actively seeking more participants.

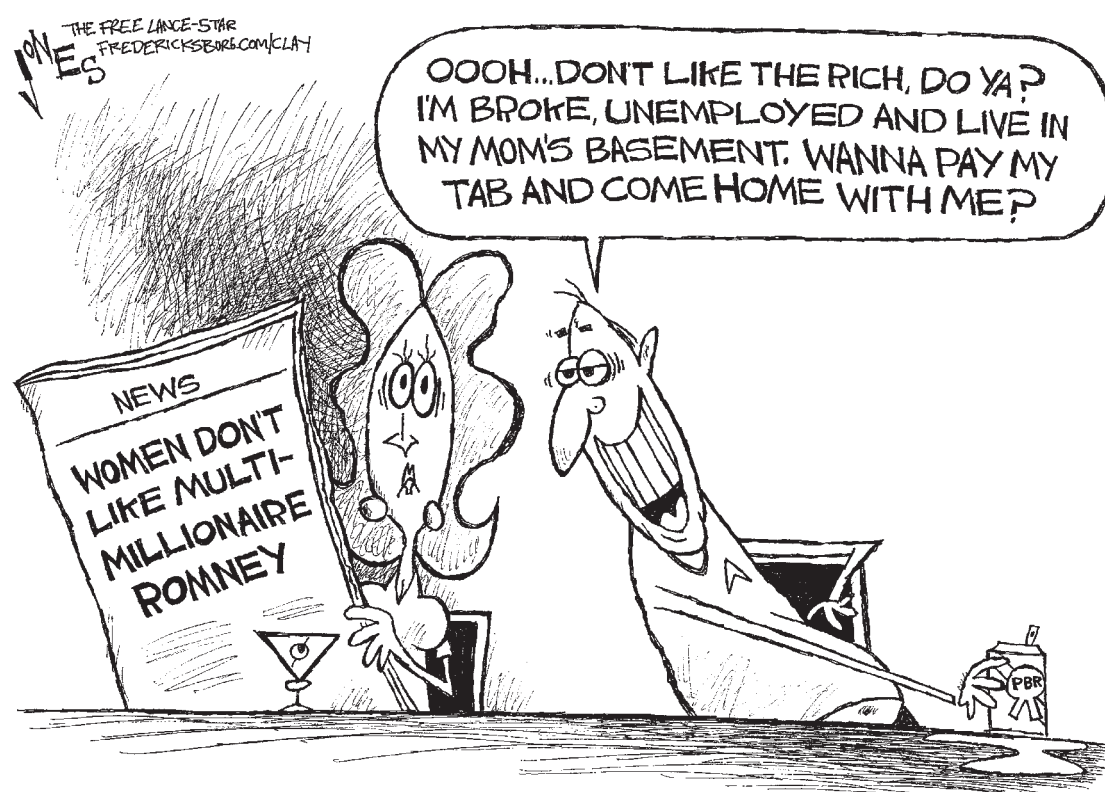

"I believe one way to stay healthy is to keep your mind healthy," Murley said.

It's a magnificent opportunity and there for the taking whether you are pursuing a degree, simply interested in auditing a class or just looking for a way to meet people.

When you stop learning, you start dying.

Thank a teacher

Young children in Hardin County deserve the best we can give them.

Week of the Young Child, April 22-28, is a time to recognize the needs of young children and thank the adults involved in their education and care. Parents, teachers, child caregivers, and other adults play important roles in the lives of young children, and Week of the Young Child celebrates their efforts.

Early education programs, including preschool, kindergarten, Head Start, First Steps, and Child Care programs, provide crucial learning experiences for many young children. Research shows that high quality early childhood programs help children develop the skills they need to succeed in school, including language, pre-mathematics, and social skills. Supporting these programs is the right choice for the Hardin County community.

We can show support for early learning promoting early literacy programs, thanking teachers and child care professionals who care for our children, and working to ensure that public policies support early learning.

It is essential that we enhance the quality of young children's lives through early childhood care and education

Endorsement letter guidelines

The News-Enterprise editorial board welcomes personal letters from readers endorsing candidates for public offices in the May 22 primary election. To accommodate as many letters as possible, please follow these guidelines:

■ Endorsement letters will be limited to 350 words or fewer.

■ Letters must be written by the person who signs them. Name, telephone number and residence are required for verification.

■ Letters whose writers do not respond to verification calls will not be printed.

■ No endorsement letters will be published after Sunday, May 20. No new issues can be introduced in the May 20 newspaper.

■ Space may be exhausted before late-arriving letters can be published. Letters submitted by e-mail may be published more quickly. Letters may be submitted in legibly handwritten, typed or e-mail form.

while supporting families.

I personally would like to thank the professional and caring preschool staff in Hardin County Schools. Our 17 preschool teams nurture, care and teach young children every day through thoughtful lesson planning, hands-on, developmentally appropriate activities and even through play. They prepare children for school as they encourage a love of learning.

I also want to thank our kindergarten staff in all our elementary schools in Hardin County. They are dedicated to young children as they plan, implement, differentiate, enrich, remediate, motivate and encourage students every day.

You can make a difference by volunteering at a local school, child care program, or Head Start; educating yourself and others about the importance of quality early childhood education in preparing young children for school; supporting policies that provide quality early learning opportunities for all young children.

Week of the Young Child is a great time for all of us to acknowledge the needs of young children, and work together to build better futures for all children.

Mixing ignorance and democracy

This is an election year, which means all of us will spend the next few months carefully following the campaigns, finding out all we can about the candidates' proposals and pondering what issues are most vital for the nation's future.

Just kidding. Most of us wouldn't do that if you Tased us to within an inch of our lives.

In fact, many won't learn the most rudimentary facts about the people running for office and the policy issues they will have to address. Some of us will jump to believe any half-baked rumor or stereotype that confirms our prejudices.

We'll vote to reward or punish incumbents for events that they have nothing to do with. Some voters won't even find out the names of the people running for many offices. In short, the citizenry as a whole will carry out what looks like a giant cartoon parody of democracy.

STEVE

Our form of government is one of those inventions that often look much better in concept than in practice. We see ourselves as a sober, enlightened people who jealously guard the national ideals and voting prerogatives for which our forebears died. We trust that our sound principles and attention to current events will yield good government in the end.

But we rarely live up to our self-image. There is a consistently large gap between what people need to know and what they actually do know.

Most think the federal budget is too big, but the only program a majority wants to cut is foreign aid — which makes up about 1 percent of spending. Voters think taxes are too high but don't realize they've been reduced. One reason Americans supported the invasion of Iraq was that most of them had the erroneous idea that Saddam Hussein carried out the 9/11 attacks.

It's not just the issues of the day that flummox people. Most Americans don't know the three branches of government. They don't know the name of the person representing them in Congress.

Civics teachers, foundations and the League of Women Voters strive to improve the functioning of democracy by educating people about politics and government. Their efforts bring to mind the joke about how many psychiatrists it takes to change a light bulb: only one, but it really has to want to change.

The most concerted efforts to inform voters won't work unless voters have good reason to learn. And they don't.

After all, a person who learns a lot in order to vote intelligently has almost zero chance of changing the outcome of any election. Aside from the feeling of virtue it may confer, it's an irrational indulgence. Ignorance, by contrast, is perfectly rational.

"Political knowledge levels have risen little if at all over the last several decades, despite major increases in education and the availability of information," writes George Mason University law professor Ilya Somin in a draft book, "Democracy and Political Ignorance." "Demand for information, not supply, is the main constraint on political learning in a world where most people are rationally ignorant about politics."

This knowledge void is hard to square with our belief in democracy — which relies on ordinary people to 1) figure out what the government should do and 2) elect candidates who will implement their preferences.

Their depressing failure is enough to raise doubts about the validity of government by the people. Of course, the founders of the American republic had plenty of those doubts. That's why they built in checks on popular control, particularly restrictions on who may participate in elections.

But we're not going back to limited suffrage, and it's hard to believe the country would be better off if most people were barred from voting. Even an ill-informed electorate will fare better if it has a role in choosing its leaders — just as patients gain from being allowed to choose their doctors, despite not having been to medical

Very little work results in these life lessons

If there's a contest for making the most stupid remark this political season, we may have a winner. That would be Hilary Rosen, the Democratic pundit who observed that Ann Romney, a mother of five, "never worked a day in her life."

Because everybody knows that a mother's work is never done, Rosen's remark went over like a squadron of concrete balloons. While it was a clumsy attempt to mock Ann Romney, my own reaction was different. I took it as a character recommendation.

I don't begrudge Ann Romney at all. While other little boys grew up wanting to be firefighters or pilots, I just wanted never to work a day in my life. The best I could do was to go into journalism, where the heavy lifting isn't much (although I did get a paper cut once).

Besides, work is work, a tedious business.

There's the work of the conventional world — the sort that gave rise to the expression "Work is the curse of the drinking man" — and there's the work of the parent, looking after children and strapping the dog to the roof of the family car. It is arrogant to suggest one is superior to the other.

Indeed, having spent more than 40 years in the newspaper industry — tote that sentence, pull that adjective — I have sometimes wondered whether I might have done better had I truly never worked a day in my life, say as a member of Congress or as a civil servant in a government department. But this conjecture raises a larger question beyond politics.

What signature achievements add up to a well-rounded life? Is work in a conventional workplace a prerequisite for wisdom and understanding? Here are my own observations drawn from years of experience in being alive, albeit sometimes with a comatose look from having attended too many office meetings:

■ Everybody should go to college. Young people should stay up to all hours of the night in dorm rooms and argue absurd political and philosophical points with fellow students, the better to get absurdity out of their systems. A failure to do this can lead to an addiction to talk radio in later years.

Only in college can young minds immerse themselves in reading the great poets and writers, understanding history, studying science and, just for a break, learning to play Beer Pong.

■ Everybody should have one doomed romance. You know the saying: It is better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. Unfortunately, this is a complete lie. It's a real pain to be dropped by someone who obviously has no taste.

The only good that comes from failed love affairs is that they teach people that they are not as attractive as they thought and they may have to develop a sense of humor to compensate. Please try to do this, people. It would help me in my column-writing work.

■ Everybody should serve a spell in the military. Ideally, an old-fashioned drill sergeant can tell the young recruit that he (or she) is a horrible worm, a useless (bad word), a (bad word) and (another bad word) only good for (you guessed it, yet another bad word).

However, it may be that drill sergeants have changed with the times and now put a mint on the recruit's pillows before bed. I sincerely hope not. Say what you like about the old, rude boot camp treatment, but it did prepare many a man for matrimony later. Yes sir, yes dear.

■ Everybody should be married at least once because, let's face it, you are never going to be given so many presents at one time on any other occasion.

■ Everybody should have the blessing of children. It is true that when small they require a lot of maintenance and when big they eat you out of house and home, take the car keys and play Beer Pong in the basement, this being the only sign you will see of their expensive college educations. On the plus side, having children does give you an excuse to go to Disney World on vacation.

■ Everybody should work in a corporate setting sometime, with all the warmth and cuddly ambience that suggests, if only to understand that corporations aren't really people.

Ann Romney may be given a pass on this last requirement because her husband may himself be a corporation. But what makes for a good life is a large number of factors, not just one. Rosen's dog of a remark won't hunt, even if it isn't strapped to the car roof.

Can widespread political ignorance be cured? Probably not — though, as Somin argues, we can minimize its effects through simple, transparent institutions and decentralized power, which reduce the amount of knowledge voters need. But however serious the flaws of popular government, we really have no alternative.

Democracy may produce fiscal bloat and political gridlock, but it doesn't produce Saddam Hussein or Kim Jong-il. It's not an assurance of the best outcomes. It is, however, a pretty good protection against the worst.

Obama makes foul call for economic 'fairness'

You have got to give credit where credit is due.

President Barack Obama has laid out the core message of his re-election campaign. It is a message whose claims are blatantly false and whose point is irrelevant to what is of greatest concern to Americans today.

Despite this, there is no evidence so far that his strategy and messaging is not working and won't be successful.

In his speech Tuesday at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, the president defined what he called "the defining issue of our time."

This defining issue, per the president, appears to be that America is not fair.

We suffer today, Obama says, from "a shrinking number of people who are doing really, really well, but a growing number who are struggling to get by."

Apparently the reason this is happening is because ours is not a nation in which "everybody gets a fair shot and everybody does a fair share, and everybody plays by the same set of rules."

Now excuse me for pointing out the irony of hearing from our nation's first black president a suggestion that America may no longer be a nation where dreams can be realized or where someone can come out of nowhere and make it.

But Obama probably would explain his unlikely success in this unfair nation as the result of his being an exceptional and extraordinary individual. Which is why, I would assume in his thinking, we ordinary folk should turn our lives over to him to determine who should have what.

Ironically, I would say that if America is unfair today, it is because politicians and government have the power to do exactly what it is that Obama wants to do: Seize control of the wealth of some and redistribute it to whomever they choose.

The Bible that I read every day calls this theft.

STAR PARKER

The president seeks to gain political support for this redistribution of wealth by tapping into the widespread dissatisfaction with our most disappointing economy.

But is our economy underperforming because some have more than others, because some succeed more than others?

At a time when Americans are looking for answers to restart our sputtering economy, our president chooses to use his time complaining about the wealthiest not paying sufficient taxes.

But according to the National Taxpayers Union, in 2009 the top 5 percent of income earners paid almost 59 percent of the funds raised by the federal personal income tax and the bottom 50 percent paid about 2.25 percent.

Yet, in the president's remarks in Florida, he defined fairness as everybody playing by "the same set of rules." Not only are the tax rules not fair by the president's own definition, in the name of alleged fairness he wants to make them even more unfair.

Of course, the president's real problem is that his policies have failed so he has to change the subject. He told us that the almost $900 billion in stimulus spending passed in 2009 would revive our economy and reduce unemployment to 6 percent. Three years later, unemployment stands at 8.2 percent.

There is no evidence that our president has a clue about what why we are not on the path to recovery. But, unfortunately, he does have a clue about how to tap into the worst instincts of people to garner political support. Inspiring blame and envy, sadly, pays political dividends.

The fairness the president obsesses about has nothing to do with fairness, nor does it have anything to do with fixing our economy.

If he really wants guidance on a fair and moral tax system, he might turn to his Bible instead of his campaign spin machine.

He can learn there that the 10 percent tithe on income applies to everyone.

DEAR ABBY

Ex-wife can't take man's trash talk about girlfriend

Dear Abby: My ex-husband likes to call to ask me for advice. Our most recent conversation was in regard to his girlfriend and her sexual past, which he knew about before they started dating. He now disproves of her history and he began calling her unpleasant names. He tells me he deserves better but intends to stay with her until he gets bored.

Hearing this sort of talk gives me a stomachache and heartburn. I feel terrible for the woman. I want to be a friend to my ex, but I'm not sure I can handle the stress it causes. He has had a hard life, and I didn't make it any easier by divorcing him.

Is the only solution not to take his calls, like my friends tell me? I'm not sure I can do that without major guilt. — Wisconsin Reader

■ Dear Reader: I'll offer another option: The next time your ex starts asking you for relationship advice, tell him you don't like hearing the way he talks about his girlfriend. Explain it makes you so uncomfortable you prefer to avoid the topic of his love life. If he respects your wishes, continue taking his calls. If not, because you find them upsetting, refuse them.

And please, stop feeling guilty about the divorce. From your description of your former husband, he is a user, and you're lucky to be rid of him.

CHILDREN IN CHURCH.

Dear Abby: I attend a church with about 350 worshippers. The church provides a supervised nursery for infants to 2 years of age. Most parents with babies use it. However, one couple has a 2-year-old child and a 2-month-old baby. These parents do not take advantage of the nursery, but keep the kids in the sanctuary.

Last Sunday the baby, who was in the father's arms, cried during most of the service. The parents may be able to tune it out, but many of us were very distracted by the wailing.

The father is a school teacher. I couldn't help but wonder how this teacher would handle a student who caused such a disruption in his classroom. I don't think he would tolerate an hour of loud crying from anyone. Why don't these people understand their behavior prevents others from worshipping as they would like? — Silence, Please

■ Dear Silence, Please: That's a good question, and one I recommend you pose to the person who was conducting the service. Out of consideration for the congregation, he or she should "remind" the parents the nursery is available, and stress in the future it be used to prevent the problem from recurring because the disruption caused "so many complaints."

'TWEEN 12 & 20

There are advantages in not being shaped like Dolly

Dr. Wallace: I am writing in response to the 15-year-old girl who was concerned about the size of her bust. I just wanted to let her know I am in my mid-20s, and have had a small bust most of my life. My intelligence, beauty, or ability to attract members of the opposite sex has never been hindered because of my breast size.

I know it can be rough to deal with, especially in your teens and during your high school years, but it gets better with age. It is probably difficult for her to imagine someday her breast size will not matter so much, but it is true. If she is worried about getting a boyfriend, she shouldn't be. Of course, there are men out there who prefer women with large breasts, but there also are men out there who prefer blondes to brunettes. It just depends on the man. In my experience, I have never had a man not like me because of the size of my breasts.

Small breasts also can be an advantage in other areas as well. For example, I'm an avid exerciser. I run, walk, play volleyball and lift weights. Small breasts easily fit into a sports bra, and they don't ever get in the way of my physical activities. Also, properly fitting clothing is much easier to find.

This young lady should also take into account she is only 15, and she still has time to finish developing. Even if her bust doesn't get any bigger, I hope what I've said gives her some hope that her life will still be happy and fulfilling. — Nameless, Detroit, Mich.

ROBERT WALLACE

■ Nameless: Thanks for reminding young ladies there are many advantages in not having a "Dolly Parton" shape.

I CARE FOR MY BABY'S FATHER. Dr. Wallace: Last spring my boyfriend (15) and I (16) had sex for the first time and as luck would have it, I got pregnant. My parents supported me and encouraged me to keep the baby. My boyfriend's parents encouraged me to have an abortion, and when I did not, they forced him to stop seeing me. I had a beautiful little girl.

I still care for the baby's father, and I want him to take an active part in our baby's future. What can I do to force him to take care of his responsibility? As you are well aware, I couldn't have become pregnant without his cooperation. — Nameless, St. Charles, Ill.

■ Nameless: Because of the boy's young age, there is nothing you can do to force him to accept his responsibility of being a father — physically or legally. I'd advise you to keep an open and honest relationship with him. When he becomes older, it is possible he will choose to accept his responsibility.

Until then, accept the love and support of your parents and concentrate on being the best possible mother to your baby.

Andy the Ambulance gets a makeover

When Hardin County EMS community relations officer Chris Miller needed to give a local public relations icon a makeover, he turned to some local experts for help. Andy the Ambulance has been a popular mascot for the Hardin County EMS for several years. And time had taken a toll on Andy.

"Andy's paint had yellowed and his decals were falling off," said Miller. "I believe we purchased him in 2000 and after more than 10 years, it was time to fix him up."

Miller contacted Doug Yates, a family friend who operates Yates Body Shop. Yates told Miller to leave Andy's outer shell with him and he would make a few phone calls and see what he could do. He then contacted Tom Disney of Pro Finish and, along the way, Tom Smith of Auto Trim and Design.

As Yates donated several hours preparing Andy for a new paint job, Disney donated the new primer and paint products for the task. After Yates restored Andy's paint, Miller then took Andy to Tom Smith. Smith began to work on duplicating the graphics that would update Andy and make him an exact replica of the new Hardin County ambulances by matching the new logo and adding the safety stripes that now are required on the rear of emergency vehicles. The project took several months to complete and in the spring of 2011, Andy was ready to go.

Yates, Disney and Smith were awarded plaques in April recognizing their work.

Yates later told Miller this was a special project for him since it was the last one he and his father worked on together.

"While I was taping Andy off to paint, Dad would come to the shop and sit and talk with me." Disney said he also was glad to help with the project because "Andy teaches kids not to be afraid of EMTs and paramedics, because they are there to help."

Yates recalled an accident that occurred near the family body shop when his daughter was young. One of the victims came to the shop to await medical attention. The situation and the responding emergency vehicles proved very scary and upset his daughter.

A police officer, who also responded, recognized her fear and later provided her with a teddy bear he carried in his patrol car. This calmed her and Yates took notice. Though Smith and his wife do not have children of their own, they appreciate the value of the service Andy provides in educating children of Hardin County.

Together, the three men provided Miller with the exact restoration he wanted.

"My goal was to make Andy look like the new ambulances Hardin County added to its fleet. Andy now looks just like the ambulances you see on the streets of Hardin County. These men did a great job on this project."

Andy the Ambulance is available by appointment. To have the ambulance brought out to talk to a group, school, church, troop or community event, contact Chris Miller at emscommunity@hardin.com or call Hardin County EMS at 769-3014.

Community to celebrate Arbor Day

This year, members of Greenspace, Let's Spruce Up, Elizabethtown Parks and Recreation, students of Elizabethtown Community Technical College and the local Division of Forestry staff will hold an Arbor Day celebration at Freeman Lake Park.

The groups plan to plant more than 300 seedlings consisting of pin oaks, swamp chestnut oaks and overcup oaks. There also will be seedlings to be handed out to the general public who attend. The planting is from 9 a.m. to noon April 21 at the Greenspace Building at Freeman Lake Park.

Arbor Day is an annual observance that celebrates the role of trees in our lives and promotes tree planting and care. As a formal national holiday, it was first observed in 1872, in the state of Nebraska, but tree planting festivals are as old as civilization. The tree has appeared throughout history and literature as the symbol of strength and life.

Study ranks Lexington high for online fraud

Listed 10th out of 150 cities

By SCOTT SLOAN
Lexington Herald-Leader

A study by a company that helps secure data on websites suggests Lexington sees more fraudulent on-line transactions than other cities its size.

The study by ThreatMetrix, which used data from the 5,000 Web sites that use its software, found Lexington had the 10th highest percentage of originating online fraud among 150 major cities.

Lexington ranked behind New York City, Atlanta, Chicago, Los Angeles, Omaha, Dallas, San Francisco, Houston and Washington D.C.

"It's kind of unusual," said Alisdair Faulkner, chief products officer of ThreatMetrix.

Faulkner said Lexington's high ranking could be explained by a larger number of transactions coming from there for the websites used.

But it's also possible, he said, that criminals operating in Lexington benefit from the ease of shipping from the area "because once you've got something online, you want to be able to get rid of the goods," he said.

Beshear recognized by business magazine

Kentucky Press News Service

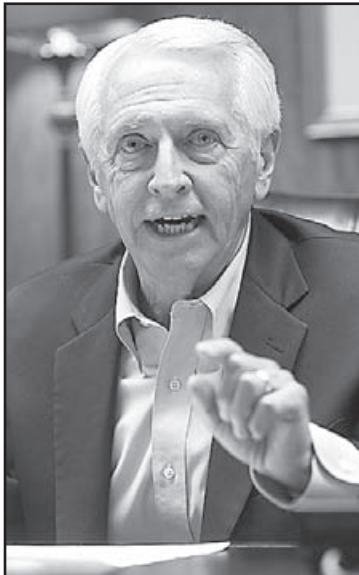

FRANKFORT — Gov. Steve Beshear has been named "Person of the Year" by the national economic development publication Southern Business & Development magazine.

The magazine's winter 2012 issue, which hit mailboxes this week, applauds Beshear's leadership in economic development and his ability to get past partisanship to accomplish his goals. It also marks the first time a governor has been named Person of the Year by the publication, according to a press release from Beshear's office.

"It is an honor to be personally recognized by a leading economic development publication for my commitment to create and retain jobs across the commonwealth," Beshear said in the news release. "Since I became governor in 2007, my number one priority has been to cultivate a business climate where companies, both large and small, can invest and grow with confidence. We still have more we want to accomplish, but it's nice to see that these efforts are recognized."

The cover story highlights several of Beshear's accomplishments, such as the partnership with Indiana Gov. Mitch Daniels, a Republican, to tackle one of the country's largest infrastructure projects — the Ohio River Bridges Project.

"Major two-state cooperation is rare because it's hard,"

JOHN FLAVELL/The Associated Press

Kentucky Gov. Steve Beshear in his office Friday.

Daniels is quoted as saying for the article. "It can only happen when people on both sides put taxpayers and the public interest ahead of politics and parochialism. That's the kind of guy I've found Steve Beshear to be and why I've developed such a feeling of friendship and respect for him."

The story also highlights several high-profile economic development projects, such as Ford, GE, UFLEX and Argonne, as well as the success of the Governor's Incentives for a New Kentucky programs, which were created in 2009 to modernize and streamline the state's economic incentives toolbox.

Beshear also is applauded for his leadership in education.

An expansion of Lincoln National Bank's Parkway branch in Hodgenville will add four offices and provide greater privacy for creating new accounts and loan processing, according to Pam Stephens, the bank's marketing director.

The volume of business has outgrown the facility, which opened in 1999, Stephens said. The contractor is Joe Pearman and work is scheduled to be completed by early summer. The branch is open for business during the renovation.

Take charge of debt to avoid default

Dear Debt Adviser: I have two credit card debts with a total of $15,000, and I'm still paying the minimum on both. What should I do if I can't make the minimums? I have a house payment and a parent loan I co-signed for my daughter. The household income is more than $65,000 this year, but it could be as low as $55,000 some years. Should I start talking to the creditors before I'm in default? I'm in the most hopeless situation. How do I find a decent nonprofit counseling agency? Please help. — Mesfin

■ Dear Mesfin: Yes, you should definitely seek help before you default on your credit card accounts. Many people make the mistake of ignoring their financial situation until it is too late for most assistance programs, and they end up having no other choice but to file for bankruptcy. Plus, once you default, your credit score will dip, and future credit will be more expensive — if it's available at all. Your credit reports will have blemishes on them as well. These will complicate your life for years to come when looking for housing, cars, insurance or even a new job.

It's much better to take action. However, do your homework before calling your creditors. Otherwise, you'll appear disorganized and unreliable. The call will go much better if you know what you need in terms of interest or payment concessions to balance your budget, and if you can articulate how you got into this mess and why it won't happen again. I don't recommend calling and asking for generic help.

A credit counselor can help you prepare a budget and give you some ideas of the types of concessions that may be out there. You can find a qualified nonprofit credit counseling agency through the Association of Independent Consumer Credit Counseling Agencies or the National Foundation for Credit Counseling. I like these organizations because their member agencies must meet strict standards that protect consumers. They have certified credit counselors trained to help you find the best solution for your specific financial situation.

Here are some suggestions that will improve your financial situation.

First, figure out if you can either increase your income or decrease your expenses. This problem will not resolve itself without a lot of work on your part. You're going to have to either earn more money or spend less to balance things out. Your credit counselor can help you identify areas where you may be able to cut back on expenses.

Second, stop helping other people and help yourself. Just as you are instructed to put on your own oxygen mask first before you help a child or other person on an airplane, you also must get your own finances in order before attempting to help anyone else. You ultimately are hurting yourself and the person you are trying to help if your actions weaken your own financial position. Explain your situation to your daughter and ask her to help. This is a valuable life lesson for her as well as you. Share what is going on so she knows how adults handle problems. If your daughter is able to help with the co-signed loan, let her.

Finally, set financial goals and develop a plan to achieve them. I would recommend your first goal be to begin putting money into an emergency savings account. It will be small at first, but it will grow in time and give you an essential cushion for unexpected expenses or income dips. Lastly, stop charging until you pay off your credit card debt. Seeing the cash fly out of your wallet instead of just swiping a card may help you avoid temptation — and default.

Feds soften rule on oversight of complex markets

Federal regulators are softening a plan to oversee companies that trade financial derivatives, the complex investments that played a central role in the 2008 financial crisis.

The rule defines which companies trading derivatives will be subject to a stricter regime created in the 2010 overhaul of financial laws. Most companies that deal derivatives will be exempt.

The Securities and Exchange Commission and Commodity Futures Trading Commission approved the rule unanimously in separate votes Wednesday. The rule says derivatives used by companies to offset their own risk will not attract scrutiny. The higher oversight standard would apply only to companies that sell $8 billion or more of the investment products annually.

MARKETWATCH WEDNESDAY

EUROPE WEIGHS HEAVILY ON U.S. STOCK MARKET. It hardly needed it, but the U.S. stock market on Wednesday got another reminder of how its fortunes are inexorably tied to the European economy.

All three major U.S. stock indexes sank after a dismal report about bad loans on the books of Spanish banks. The day before, U.S. stocks had soared after Spain held a successful auction of 2-year bonds.

The results underscored how the stock market can whip-saw on even incremental news out of Europe, and it has done just that for the past couple of weeks.

Snow, played by Guy Pearce, in "Lockout."

'Lockout' is no knockout

By BECCA OWSLEY

bowsley@thenewsenterprise.com

March and April usually produce a steady stream of mediocre films before the big summer movie season starts in May.

These aren't necessarily bad films, just something you'd rather rent or catch on television than pay to see in a theater.

"Lockout" is one of those movies. It's not totally bad but it's not great.

In the year 2079, the U.S. president's daughter, Emilie, played by Maggie Grace (TV's "Lost") travels to a space prison on a humanitarian mission to make sure officials aren't experimenting on prisoners.

A prison break erupts and she is held hostage. If you are thinking already that there are too many plot points, you are correct. The first plot point is lost in the shuffle.

Enter Snow, played by Guy Pearce ("The King's Speech"). Snow is an ex-CIA agent accused of a crime he didn't commit who is asked to rescue the president's daughter. He also is trying to clear his name in the process.

On top of all that, the space prison is falling toward Earth.

The film also stars Vincent

Emilie, played by Maggie Grace, and Snow, played by Guy Pearce, attempt to escape the space prison in "Lockout."

Regan, Joseph Gilgun and Peter Stormare. If you don't recognize those names, you got my point. There are no big names to anchor this movie. Usually if the hero is not a big name, filmmakers hire a known actor for the villain. Not in this case. Viewers might at least recognize Stormare from "Fargo" and "Armageddon."

The result basically is "Die Hard" in a space prison. The plot points that are supposed to twist the story are predictable.

The action in the beginning of the film is quick and jumpy but the special effects are not bad.

One major problem is the dialogue. Only a few actors really can pull off cheesy lines. Bruce Willis, Sylvester Stallone and Arnold Schwarzenegger have been getting away with it for years but it doesn't work for Pearce.

"Lockout" is somewhat entertaining and if I had been flipping through television stations on a rainy Saturday afternoon it probably would be one to stop and watch. But it might not be something to pay to see in the theater. In the end, viewers are left with a somewhat entertaining action flick studios knew wouldn't make it against movies coming up this summer and was thrown in the April rotation, hoping to get a decent showing at the box office.

Wait and see this one when it's available to rent. If you want to see a better action movie, check out "John Carter." It got a bad rap from its studio and did not get the attention it deserved.

Making a bucket-free list

A couple of weekends ago I found myself in Madisonville in western Kentucky.

As unlikely as it might seem, I was there to audition for an independent film, a psychological thriller by an area production company.

That is not the crux of the story.

What prompted me to write this column is a comment my girlfriend, Rebecca Ricks, made after the audition. See, she auditioned, too, and she's really the main reason I auditioned in the first place; she scheduled an audition for herself and hoped I would try, too. She would follow-through with the audition, she said, but it would be more fun if I did, too.

Sure. Why not?

We arranged to get an audition for the same time, and it was fun, especially seeing Rebecca get such a kick out of it.

As we spoke with the writer and met the founder of Big Biting Pig Productions, Rebecca noted auditioning for a movie was now something she could cross off her bucket list.

At the time I didn't give the comment much thought.

Several days later I started thinking about it and concluded it might be interesting for each of us to create such a list. In fact, I told Rebecca, I had thought about doing something similar myself for a few

Making a bucket list is the first thing on my bucket list.

But before taking on this task, I told her, I'd want to change what we called it.

The term bucket list obviously refers to kicking the bucket with the implication that the list is what you want to accomplish before then. But it sounds too imminent.

It sounds, as the old saying goes, as if you've got one foot in the grave and the other on a banana peel.

So I guess I should change the first thing on my bucket list to re-naming the list.

Then the second thing on my list would be to make the list.

Then when I finished making the list with the new name I could cross off the first two items on the list.

No, that's not cheating.

Really. It's not.

Filling out the rest of that list would involve some thought. There might be some things that would be nice to do in the coming years.

Some travel might be involved. Some doughnuts might be involved.

To tell the truth, there are no goals or desires that are so overwhelming I feel I must absolutely accomplish them. I'm not sure that's what the list is about, either.

These should be things I've always had an interest in doing but, for whatever reason, never pursued. To make such a list also would require a great deal of honesty without fear of potential embarrassment, though I can't think of anything I've always wanted to do that might embarrass me.

We'll see how that goes.

Maybe the list should be called the My Last Chance List.

Maybe not.

That sounds more impending than the bucket list.

Then again that name might be the motivation I need to get things on the list done.

Nah. Just sounds morbid to me.

Maybe the list should be called a Life Ambition List.

Hmmm. That's a possibility.

Whatever Rebecca and I decide to name the list, I'll be interested to see what she puts on it.

Truth be told, I'll be interested to see what ends up on my own list.

New Highland Elementary School students who participated in the D.A.R.E. program admire their certificates and medals received Wednesday morning at the graduation program.

D.A.R.E.: 'I think it's a wonderful program'

In addition to drugs, the 10-week program also covers topics such as peer pressure, personal pressure and choosing the right friends, said Shumate, who is on his seventh year as a D.A.R.E. educator.

New Highland student Erica McClain, one of the school's four D.A.R.E. essay winners, said the class has prepared her to keep friends who help her make the right decisions and walk away from those who encourage her to make the wrong ones.

"I'm going to try my best to stay away from it," she said about drug use in middle and high school.

Education and police officials agree fifth grade is the right year for the D.A.R.E. program as students are preparing to enter middle school, earning new freedoms and facing different pressures.

"In middle school, everything turns upside down," said Mark Thomas, principal at New Highland Elementary. "Catching them early is a key."

New Highland parent Tonja Basham saw her second child graduate from the D.A.R.E. program

Wednesday. She said she had an experience with her oldest child, a senior at a local high school, who was exposed to marijuana.

The high school student discussed the encounter with her, said Basham, who believes drug education and positive parent-child communication played a role in her child's decision.

"I think it's a wonderful program," she said of D.A.R.E.

Shumate and Willoughby said the D.A.R.E. classes also are a positive way for young people to encounter police officers and build a relationship with local law enforcement.

"Most of the time when we see police, something bad has happened," Shumate said. "This is one of the truly positive dealings they have with police."

To those who argue D.A.R.E. hasn't made an impression on the nation's youth, Willoughby said the biggest impact happens at home.

"If all that's ever mentioned is what they hear at school, obviously there's going to be a problem," he said.

Sarah Bennett can be reached at (270) 505-1750.

anywhere from $400 to $900, Todd said, depending on its size and construction. The cost of a trash can is estimated at between $80 to $100.

Virgil Willoughby, public information officer for Elizabethtown Police Department, said with the exception of the Hall's Supply fire, no other buildings were seriously damaged, and the investigation is ongoing.

"There's probably more charges forthcoming," he said.

Dembek was arraigned Wednesday morning via video feed at Hardin District Court. She is scheduled to appear April 30 for a preliminary hearing.

The teen is lodged at Hardin County Detention Center in lieu of a partially secured $50,000 bond.

Second-degree arson is a Class B felony punishable by 10 to 20 years in prison upon conviction. Third-degree arson is a Class D felony, carrying a penalty of one to five years.

Judge quits Trayvon Martin case, cites conflict

By MIKE SCHNEIDER

The Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Florida judge presiding over the Trayvon Martin shooting case removed herself Wednesday after the attorney for defendant George Zimmerman argued she had a possible conflict of interest that related to her husband.

Judge Kenneth M. Lester Jr. will preside over the case. The next judge who would be in the court rotation, John D. Galluzzo, also cited a conflict, so Lester was selected, according to a news release from the court.

Florida Circuit Judge Jessica Recksiedler had said she would make a decision by Friday, when a bond hearing for Zimmerman had been set. Her husband works with Orlando attorney Mark NeJame, who was first approached by Zimmerman's family to represent the neighborhood watch volunteer.

But NeJame declined and referred them to Mark O'Mara, who now is representing Zimmerman. NeJame since has been hired by CNN to comment on the case.

Galluzzo said he had a conflict because of his personal and business relationship with O'Mara.

O'Mara said he requested Recksiedler step down now because the case is just beginning and he wanted any possible conflict to be addressed right away rather than in the middle of the case. Recksiedler was assigned the case after Zimmerman's arrest last week.

Zimmerman is charged with second-degree murder for the Feb. 26 shooting of 17-year-old Martin. Zimmerman said he shot Martin in self-defense after he says the teen attacked him. Martin was unarmed.

MASTER COMMISSIONER SALES

To comply with the orders of the Hardin Circuit Court, the Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, APRIL 26, 2012 at the hour of 10:00 a.m. at the Hardin County Justice Center, 120 East Dixie Ave., Elizabethtown, Kentucky. Said property shall be sold to raise the amounts hereinafter set forth, together with interest and the costs of the action, and upon the following terms and conditions:

(A) AT THE TIME OF SALE, the successful bidder shall either pay cash or make a deposit of 10% of the purchase price with the balance on a credit of thirty (30) days UNLESS otherwise provided below. In the event the successful bidder desires or elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and furnish an acceptable surety thereon. The down payment, IN ADDITION to either a letter of credit or acceptable surety, must be produced AT THE TIME OF THE SALE. Said bond and/or letter of credit shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest at the rate of twelve percent (12%) per annum from the date of sale until paid.

(B) The purchaser shall be required to assume and pay all taxes or assessments upon the property for the current tax year, 2012 and thereafter. The Master Commissioner will make a good faith effort to obtain and pay all taxes or assessments upon the property for prior years; however, this can not be guaranteed.

(C) All properties are sold subject to the Judgment and Order of Sale in each case which should be reviewed carefully PRIOR to purchase. The Judgment and Order of Sale can be reviewed at the Hardin Circuit Clerk's Office, 120 E. Dixie, Elizabethtown, KY.

(D) The Master Commissioner DOES NOT obtain a title search or investigate for further liens on the properties listed below nor conduct or authorize a survey of the property. *The purchaser is responsible for title searches and/or any additional liens not named in the Judgment and Order of Sale and for the results of any good and accurate survey of the property.

(E) The Master Commissioner does not have access to the properties listed below and therefore makes no representation or warranty of any kind as to the conditions of these properties.

Come and experience the inspirational music of Rick Price, a multi-platinum selling artist and award-winning performer, up-close and personal. Be one of the first to hear the new song that will help build awareness and raise funds for Kentucky's abused and neglected children.

An Australian expat, Rick Price toured the US extensively in 2009 with his good friend Tommy Emmanuel before finally settling in Nashville, TN. During a recent trip to Kentucky, Rick was inspired by witnessing first-hand the valuable contributions that CASA volunteers perform for children everyday. Rick quickly realized that without these volunteers many of our children would fall between the cracks. Returning to Nashville, Rick and his friend Craig Carothers set to work on writing a song to inspire support and lift up CASA's mission. That song became 'Reach Out.'

Please come and show your support for Kentucky's abused and neglected children, and experience an unforgettable evening of music with an artist who is lauded as one of Australia's finest talents.

BUSINESS: Fugitte, Bowers, Swope shared successes draw members.

The venture group is made up of local entrepreneurs and investors who assist startup businesses.

The term “angel investing” refers to investors who help launch a potential business, which is a large part of the group’s mission.

Mo Miller, a board member of the group, talked about what the group does, including investing money in businesses while allowing entrepreneurs to remain owners of the company. Investment returns can come from a portion of revenue up to an agreed-upon amount or time.

Individual investors sometimes decide to support a business venture, even when the group does not, Miller said.

“We don’t deny that broad spectrum of opportunity to participate,” he said.

Miller said it’s good to see the ideas coming from area residents and the relative financial success of the area, including three local Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year winners.

“We are in a very strongly structured economic market,” he said. “We have lots of things going on.”

The event also was meant to feature local success stories in business to inspire and offer advice to those in the community who want to become entrepreneurs and investors.

One Ernst & Young honoree, Jim Fugitte, told audience members it is difficult with even the best infrastructure to attract businesses that can make an immediate difference in the area’s employment.

Most new jobs come from small businesses that eventually grow, so it’s important to encourage such growth, he said.

Dana Bowers, co-founder of iPay Technologies, speaks Wednesday about the company’s success during the Investing Angels of the Heartland workshop at the Historic State Theater complex in Elizabethtown.

“This activity, what we’re doing today, is absolutely crucial to jobs in our community for the 21st century,” he said.

That takes an understanding of customers, tenacious business people, and smart accumulation and use of financial resources, he said.

Another Ernst & Young honoree, Dana Bowers, described how she and her husband went from buying back the business they founded, iPay, from an Internet-based company following the burst of the online bubble to selling the company for $300 million.

About 90 percent of financial institutions, potential clients for the electronic payment service, didn’t have a provider for such a service when they reacquired the company in 2001.

They rushed against competitors for customers and put themselves in a good position by offering higher quality service than their competitors for a lower cost than most of them.

Then they expanded their technology to make their service more valuable to the financial institutions’ customers, Bowers said.

Bob Swope also was among the list of speakers and shared the Swope family success story.

His family is acquainted with the idea of angel investing.

Swope’s father and uncle began what has become a group of automotive dealerships based on startup money provided by their parents. Swope began his own dealership with the help of a $40,000 loan from those same grandparents.

“None of this would have happened, I wouldn’t be talking to you today, if it wasn’t for our angel investor,” he said.

Swope said hard work, perseverance, family values and providing customers a higher level of service than they expect has allowed the dealerships to thrive.

Illinois couple claims share of jackpot

By JIM SUHR
The Associated Press

RED BUD, Ill. — Merle Butler routinely laughed off what became the well-worn exchange among locals in Red Bud the instant word swept through the tiny southern Illinois village that a Mega Millions lottery ticket bought there scored a share of a record $656 million jackpot.

“Are you the winner?” someone would ask.

“Yeah, sure, I won it,” the retired Butler played along each time.

Little did anyone in the 3,700-resident town know Butler wasn’t kidding.

Wednesday, 19 days since the drawing, Butler and his wife, Patricia, finally stepped in front of cameras and reporters to publicly claim their $218.6 million stake of the jackpot — the secret the private retirees and grandparents had no trouble keeping.

Until going public to get the lump-sum of $111 million after taxes, the Butlers had told fewer than five people of their newfound wealth. They also consulted an attorney and a cadre of financial advisers to sort out how to invest it.

TOUR: Out-of-state units to assist re-enactors

which recognizes the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Elizabethtown but also provides re-enactments of Civil War life and suffering.

Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for children 7 to 12 years of age. Children 6 and younger can attend for free.

Twylane Van Lahr, executive director of the Brown-Pusey House, said tour guides will take groups of 25 to 30 individuals on each tour, which will include 10 to 12 vignettes depicting local soldiers and families afflicted by the war and its consequences.

Cobbler’s Café will sell food, including burrito, during the commemoration and will provide a commission from its sales to organizers. Van Lahr said the proceeds will be rolled back into the event to fund it in the future.

The tour primarily will be in the area of Poplar and Main streets. Van Lahr said organizers wanted to offer a short walk so everyone could participate. The tour also will avoid the square because traffic noise could drown out some presenters and re-enactors.

Tours begin in the garden behind the Brown-Pusey House and leave every 20 minutes. Van Lahr said visitors will see numerous examples of life at the time, including a field hospital illustrating the type of medical care wounded soldiers received during the war, and hear from local people as depicted by volunteers. In addition to local volunteers and re-enactors from Fort Duffield, Van Lahr said out-of-state units who are interested in Civil War history will assist, including a group from Tennessee.

Col. John Hunt Morgan, whose raiders descended on Elizabethtown in the winter of 1862 and encountered around 600 Union soldiers, also will be part of the depiction. Morgan placed his guns on a hill in Elizabethtown’s city cemetery where his men used the height advantage to fire on downtown. A replica cannonball embedded in a building façade on Public Square marks the point where a shot landed.

Van Lahr said muskets will be fired and background war noise will be provided to set the scene and make the tour more realistic. Live music featuring dulcimer and fiddle players will be offered as entertainment. The production was written by Kristi Johnson, a Hardin County native and playwright.

The tour wraps up at the Brown-Pusey House where an Abraham Lincoln impersonator will provide a monologue about the 16th president’s childhood in Hodgenville, the end of the war and the need for the country to heal, Van Lahr said.

“We call it a drama because it’s based on fact ... but we don’t have the everyday conversations of those (people) to pull from,” she said.

And while she hesitates to call it a celebration, she said it is a tribute to the soldiers and families who were faced with divided loyalties and loss.

“Although Kentucky never left the Union and Elizabethtown was pretty much pro-Union, there were still a lot of Confederate sympathizers here,” she said.

Rineker named Central volleyball coach

By JOHN GROTH
jgroth@thenewsenterprise.com

There's a comfort level for Bill Rineker with the Central Hardin Lady Bruins' volleyball program.

He's spent nearly a decade with the program, assisting with practices, helping develop new drills and working to improve players' full potential.

Now instead of the shadows, Rineker will be in the forefront.

He was named Central Hardin's coach Wednesday and will start work today.

Rineker, 45, takes over for Jeff Crady, who officially resigned three weeks ago. Crady guided Central Hardin to a 33-7 finish this past season after longtime coach Wendy Boeglen unexpectedly resigned hours before the team's first match. He helped guide the Bruins to their second consecutive 17th District and 5th Region tournament championships and reach the elite eight of the state tournament.

Rineker has worked with Crady for the past nine years and assistant coach Rita Highbaugh has been there since the program started in 2001 with Boeglen at the helm.

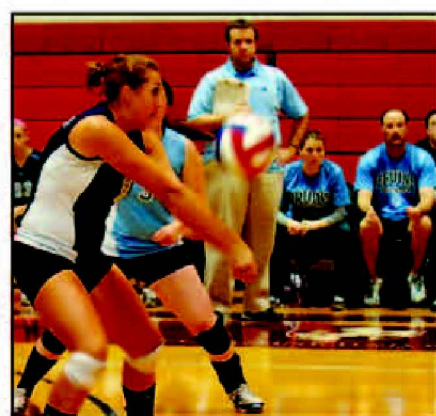

"With me being a new head coach, I've got two very, very experienced people that have done that. It definitely makes my job that much easier. They're very, very knowledgeable. We all work together as a team," said Rineker, who serves as an instructional assistant at the high school. "Me saying I'm a head coach now, it all comes down to more than one person. I'm no important than Crady or Ms. Highbaugh. We're all working together to make the program go."

Go it has.

LINCOLN HERITAGE CONFERENCE TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Winning is just old hat for Fiepkke

By JOHN GROTH
jgroth@thenewsenterprise.com

Natalie Fiepkke never wears a hat on the tennis court.

But on a whim Wednesday, she tried out a new fashion statement and broke out a blue Elizabethtown one to shield the sun during the Lincoln Heritage Conference Tournament's opening round.

"My mom (Kristin) usually tells me to pack a hat and the sun was really bad on the other side," she said.

It messed with her head a little too much. You can bet the sophomore won't be doing that again in today's quarterfinals.

Playing singles for the first time in the conference tournament, Fiepkke struggled with her serve, the sun and some nerves in the first set, but the No. 3 seed rallied for a 7-5, 6-2 victory over North Hardin junior Emily Hellinger at the University Drive Park Tennis Courts in Elizabethtown.

Hellinger jumped out to a 4-1 first-set lead and even increased it to 5-3, 30-love before Fiepkke put on an impressive rally. She won four straight games, taking the opening set on a double fault. Fiepkke found her confidence soon after.

"Hearing my mom in the background saying 'just keep it in.' That's what I need to do, I guess. In my mind, I told myself to keep it in and not kill everything," said Fiepkke, who was a conference doubles champion last year with 2011 graduate Allison Riney. "I tried to hit my ground strokes harder than I needed to. I wasn't playing smart. I was trying to go out there and win as fast as I could. I don't need to do that."

Fiepkke will play LaRue County senior Michelle Seymour, who downed Fort Knox's Maria Rogers, 6-0, 6-1 in her first-round match. After taking a year off, Seymour has already fared better than her last conference tournament in 2010 – when she fell in the first round to Natalie's older sister, AnnLauren.

While Natalie Fiepkke struggled with her focus, unseeded Meade County sophomore Jenna Mullen sure didn't.

She dispatched LaRue County senior Nancy Howell, 6-0, 6-0, to move into the quarterfinals where she'll get an eagerly anticipated rematch with fourth-seeded Central Hardin sophomore Hannah Thomas. Thomas – who defeated Mullen in the first round of last year's state tournament – topped North Hardin freshman Amanda Patterson, 6-0, 6-1.

Fort Knox shows its power in Oklahoma City

By JOSH CLAYWELL
jclaywell@thenewsenterprise.com

Weight lifting hasn't yet caught on in the Bluegrass, but it's a growing sport at Fort Knox High School.

Two Fort Knox athletes won national championships March 30 in the Natural Athlete Strength Association's High School Nationals in Oklahoma City.

Senior Josh Kleber won his weight class and was named the meet's Outstanding Male Lifter, while junior Demjya Holmes won two events and placed second in another en route to being named the meet's Outstanding Female Lifter.

"It was exiting to represent Fort Knox," Holmes said. "We move so much that it's so hard to actually stay long enough to accomplish something, so I was excited that I was able to bring back some excitement and joy to not only my school but my community."

Fort Knox set or tied 12 national records at the meet and won 46 individual trophies.

"In the past seven or eight years that we've gone to nationals, we've won at least one of five of the categories," Fort Knox coach Conrad Garcia told the Gold Standard (formerly The Turret). "Last year we won all five and this year we won three. We're the defending national champions and we think we're pretty good."

Holmes took first place in the power lifting and power sports categories and second in the power press. She had the highest co-efficiency in the Oklahoma City meet.

Holmes is ranked first in her weight class, according to the NASA website.

Akin ties for 15th in SBC tournament

The News-Enterprise

Former Central Hardin High School golf standout KARISA AKIN, a Middle Tennessee State University senior, tied for 15th Wednesday in the 55-player Sun Belt Conference women's golf tournament at the 6,264-yard, par-72 Robert Trent Jones golf course at the Shoals in Muscle Shoals, Ala.

Akin posted consecutive rounds of 75, 80 and 73 to finish with 54-hole total of 228 to help the Blue Raiders finish second out of 11 teams. Akin's scorecard consisted of 39 pars, 12 bogeys, two birdies and one double bogey.

■ Former North Hardin High School baseball star NATHAN ADCOCK, pitching for the Triple-A Omaha Storm Chasers, fell to 2-1 on Monday. In seven innings, Adcock struck out three, walked two, gave up eight hits and allowed three runs (all earned).

In his first two appearances this season with the Kansas City Royals' top farm club, Adcock didn't allow an earned run in 11 1/3 innings.

■ Former Elizabethtown High School baseball standout CHASE GREENWELL went 1-for-4 with one RBI and also closed out the game with one inning of scoreless relief Tuesday as the Morehead State Eagles beat Marshall, 7-2.

A junior shortstop, Greenwell started the Eagles' first 37 games, batting .352 and hitting a team-high 12 doubles.

■ Last week, former Elizabethtown basketball star ANTWAIN BARBOUR was named the Eurobasket.com Player of the Week in Croatia.

Scoring a game-high 18 points and grabbing seven rebounds, Barbour led Cibona (7-0) to an 85-71 win over KK Zagreb CO. The victory allowed Cibona – which also features Demonte Harper (Morehead State product), Khalid El-Amin (Connecticut) and Goran Suton (Michigan State) – to take over sole possession of first place.

Barbour is averaging 13.4 points per game in his first season with Cibona.

■ Flaherty native RYAN SIPES, a professional motorcross and supercross racer, is slated to be back in action Saturday night. He underwent surgery after breaking his hand and suffering a stage-four AC separation in his shoulder during a practice crash Feb. 7.

"It was a dirty crash, but I mean I'm pretty lucky," Sipes told Leatt Brace during an online video interview posted Monday. "It could have been way worse."

Sipes is entered in the West Region lites class in the event at CenturyLink Field in Seattle, which coincidentally is also the home of former Central Hardin baseball star and current Seattle Mariners relief pitcher STEVIE DELABAR – who has appeared in six games this season.

Garcia and Beltran team up as Cardinals beat Reds, 11-1

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Jaime Garcia pitched seven effective innings and hit a two-run triple, Carlos Beltran homered again and the St. Louis Cardinals extended their winning streak to a season-high four games Wednesday night with an 11-1 rout of the slumping Cincinnati Reds.

Beltran hit a two-run shot, his fifth homer overall and second of the series. Tyler Greene also had a two-run homer, while Rafael Furcal had four hits and drove in two runs.

Garcia (2-0) allowed one run on seven hits and three walks. He was aided by four double plays and helped his cause with a triple off the wall in center field in the sixth that made it 7-1 and chased Mat Latos (0-2).

The Reds have dropped 5-of-6 games on their 10-game road trip and are already five games back of the Cardinals in the NL Central. Devin Mesoraco drove in Cincinnati's only run with an infield single in the fifth.

Latos lasted 5 2/3 innings for his longest stint of the year, but was touched for eight runs on nine hits while walking three and striking out six.

The Cardinals greeted Latos rudely as Furcal doubled down the line in right leading off the first and Beltran followed with a walk.

Furcal later scored on Lance Berkman's infield single and David Freese delivered a two-run double.

Beltran made it 5-0 when he homered with two out in the second. That was not an uncommon occurrence — Beltran had also homered off Latos in his two other official at-bats entering Wednesday, though Latos did later retire Beltran for the first time in the fourth on a groundout.

Mullen placed the ball well Wednesday and said she needs to keep the ball in play against Thomas. But she came out a little irked for another reason, too.

“I’m focused and ready already. I’d play right now (if I could),” Mullen said. “Because I didn’t get a seed and I want to prove that I deserve one.”

Lady Waves coach Michele Miller thought Mullen played well and told her to start working on preparations for today when she was up 3-0 in the second set.

“She needs to trust that forehead,” Miller said. “When she was going to State, it was her first time ... she was on center court. It’s like I tell her, she needs to play her game, play Jenna Mullen tennis.”

Besides those matches, there were three others that went three sets. John Hardin senior Katie Ragland rallied for a 4-6, 6-2, 6-2 victory over Fort Knox’s Maddie

DeAmaral. In doubles, Meade County senior sophomores Brenna Wheatley and Ellie DeVries held on for a 6-2, 3-6, 10-3 victory over North Hardin’s Hannah Lowman and Allie Sutton, while senior Mallory

Brown and junior Kayla Keith earned a 6-3, 4-6, 10-5 win over John Hardin’s Brianna Anderson and Kristine Herrera in the night’s final match.

Although there plenty of tense matches for the girls, the boys ior Zach Lee and sophomore Trevor Sanders, 6-4, 6-4. Parker and McQuown advanced to play Central Hardin senior Trevor Deibel and sophomore Kyle Compton, who defeated Fort Knox’s Steven Traylor and Mason Roberts, 6-3, 6-2.

North Hardin senior Cody Hughes held on for a 6-3, 5-7, 10-6 victory over LaRue County junior Kieren Bowen.

Third-seeded LaRue County junior Ryan Abell pulled out of the tournament with an injury. His replacement, Nicholas Chantharasinh, suffered a 6-0, 6-0 loss to John Hardin sophomore Tyler Edlin – also a No. 3 seed.

Three other matches (two singles, one doubles) ended in shutouts.

But the top two seeds in singles and doubles will be in action today, giving a chance for more upsets in the making.

Boys’ quarterfinals start at 4:30 p.m. with girls’ quarterfinals to follow at 5:30. Semifinals are scheduled for 6:30 and 7:30 p.m.

KNOX: shines in meet in Oklahoma City

“Josh and myself came into the season knowing what we wanted, and Coach Garcia started to prepare us to win,” she said. “We trained hard, and in the end it was all worth it.”

Holmes, who also plays soccer and softball at Fort Knox, said it took Garcia a few weeks to convince her to join the team.

Looking back, she’s glad she did.

“Honestly when I first came (to Fort Knox), I didn’t want to do anything because I was the new kid at school,” Holmes said. “But after about three weeks of Coach Garcia asking me, I finally said yes. That first time I picked up the bar I knew that power lifting was something I wanted to do.”

Holmes and Kleber weren’t the only ones to perform well in Oklahoma City.

Kristin Washburn won two events and Cedila McKissick won one and was second in another. Raven Allen finished first in power sports, second in power press and second in unequipped power lift; Christina Rice took third in power press and power sports; Kentura Newman won the unequipped power lift and was second in the power sports; Ashlee Kohler won her class’ power press, power sports and unequipped power lift; Krista Whitaker placed second in the power press and power sports; Haley Fluharty won the power lift and power sports and took third in the power press; and Kariel Hernandez won the power lift, power sports and power press.

“The team did phenomenal,” Holmes said. “They trained hard for five months for this one meet. I loved watching my girls lift. Every last one of them improved beyond recognition.”

On the boys’ side, David Dalcourt won the power sports

RINEKER: becomes third coach for Central

Over the past 11 years, the Lady Bruins have won seven district championships, five region titles and have reached the elite eight of the state tournament twice. They haven’t lost a district match in two-plus years.

Rineker credits Boeglen for allowing him to stay involved in the sport he loves. Highbaugh is the one who introduced him to her and he acknowledged she allowed him the leeway to coach the way he likes.

“Without Boeglen, this would’ve never happened in the first place,” he said. “I don’t see us doing a whole lot different. We play a little different brand, a quicker style. We do quick stuff, run in the middle with some of the combination plays we run. Volleyball is constantly evolving and to be the best coach you can be you have to evolve with the game as well. I go to clinics, go to coaches better than me. I’m constantly trying to get better.”

Central Hardin athletic director Chris Bauer likes Rineker’s passion. Bauer served on the interview committee, along with a booster club representative and Central Hardin principal Ron Ortiz.

Bauer said they looked at five applicants, but only interviewed Rineker. After his interview, Bauer said the committee was pleased with the direction the program could be going.

“As an assistant with the program, you could see a little of him coming out – what he’s about as far as volleyball, the fundamen-als of volleyball and the schemes of how it’s played, of how a program is run,” Bauer said. “And now it is Bill’s to run.”

With an extremely experienced coaching staff and veteran returning group, there’s reason for Rineker to be so relaxed.

Central Hardin should return 10 seniors next season – including News-Enterprise Player of the Year Abbey Sorrells, Sydney Hall, Afton Conner, Alneisha Butler, Courtney Helton, Rachel Adkins, Chelsea Grant, Eden Tharpe, Shelby Wade and Rineker’s daughter Sarah.

Rineker grew up playing volleyball in Virginia Beach, Va., and helped found the Kentucky Heartland Volleyball Club. He has served on its board of directors since its inception, and he’s also coached KHVC teams for the past five years. Every Central Hardin senior has played for him at the club level at some point.

“They’re a very easy bunch to coach,” Rineker said. “They work hard and are dedicated.”

Biffle re-energized, on top early in season

By STEPHEN HAWKINS
The Associated Press

Biffle gave Jack Roush his first NASCAR season title in 2000 by winning the Trucks Series, two years after he was the Rookie of the Year. Then came the natural progression to the Nationwide Series, where Biffle won another Rookie of the Year award and followed immediately with the 2002 season championship before moving up again.

A decade later, Biffle is still trying to become the first driver to complete the NASCAR title trio.

This could finally be the year for the re-energized Biffle, who is coming off a victory at Texas that reinforced his standing as the early-season Sprint Cup points leader.

“When I moved from the Trucks Series to Nationwide, it was a huge step. It was much, much harder. And when I moved from the Nationwide to the Cup Series, I had no idea that the competition was going to be what it was,” Biffle said. “I knew it was going to be hard. But this year is my year.”

Biffle’s fifth top-five finish in seven races this season came in the fastest Cup race ever in Texas and snapped his 49-race winless drought. With only two early cautions, and 234 consecutive green-flag laps to end the race, he got a big boost in the pits from crew chief Matt Puccia and the rest of his team at the 1½-mile, high-banked track.

“That gives me huge confidence,” Biffle said. “I know that from about the third race, that these guys, the guys that Matt had put together, we kind of held the handcuffs on them a little bit last year until we got to the end of the season, and he revamped the entire team over the winter.

I really, really like my guys.”

Puccia, who like Biffle worked his way up through the Roush organization, replaced Greg Erwin midway through last season. The No. 16 Roush Fenway Ford had its only three poles of the season after that, but wasn’t enough to keep Biffle from finishing 16th in points, his worst since 2004 in his second full Cup season.

“That guy, I promise you, if anybody can take me to winning a championship, it’s Matt Puccia,” Biffle said. “He never gives up, never leaves a rock unturned.”

They started this season with third-place finishes in each of the first three races, taking over the points lead after the third race in Las Vegas. A pair of 13th-place finishes are the only ones outside the top six.

“It was really an unusual thing when we went after the team the way we did last year and said, you know, we just got great people but they’re not just working together as well as they need to and we need to organize ourselves differently,” Roush said after the Texas victory. “That’s a rarity that we do that. But that certainly was the key to getting the momentum that we’ve got going right now.”

Biffle is certainly off to a much better start than last season, when the same opening three-race stretch set the tone for a frustrating season.

GOLF

The hole in one is a singular sensation

By GERRY DULAC
Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

PITTSBURGH — Steve Blass has been playing golf for a long time, since before he became a World Series-winning pitcher for the Pirates. In all that time, Blass had recorded just one hole in one at a course in Florida that no longer exists.

Until that day in 2009 at a Pirates alumni golf outing, that is.

Blass had two holes in one in the same round — 11 holes apart — at Greensburg Country Club, a feat so uncommon that Golf Digest lists the odds of that happening as 67,000-to-1.

Louis Oosthuizen’s double eagle at the Masters — one of the rarest occurrences in golf — is considered to have odds of a million-to-1.

“When I was driving home, I was still so numb, still shaking,” Blass said. “It was like after the World Series — I was too thrilled to get drunk.”

He is not alone.

Alonzo Shavers, a former college football player at Ohio State, had been playing golf for 14 years without a hole in one. Then, in one afternoon, he made two — only four holes apart — at Treedale Golf & Country Club.

Shavers, a sports agent based in Columbus, Ohio, was playing in Tony Dorsett’s annual charity tournament when he performed the rare feat. He won a car for the first one, a golf trip for the second.

“It could have been a plaque, it wouldn’t have mattered to me,” Shavers said. “I sat in the cart and I didn’t say anything. I just sat there thinking, ‘Did that just happen?’”

Consider the story of the late Phyllis Semple, mother of decorated amateur Carol Semple Thompson of Sewickley and winner of several women’s club championships at Allegheny Country Club.

She had four aces in her lifetime, none since 1967, when she had two in the same round on an 18-hole par-3 course in Delray Beach, Fla., in 2007. After going 40 years without one, Semple had two in four holes.

She was 85 at the time.

There’s no formula

Why does it happen?

Why do some golfers who are so impassioned to play never record a hole in one? And why do others suddenly get two in one day?

Why do some weekend hackers get a hole in one and some PGA Tour players have none?

“It’s luck,” said PGA Tour rookie Bud Cauley, who is 22 but already has six holes in one, three in competition. “You have to hit a good shot, but it’s a lot of luck, too.”

For most players, there is no greater claim to fame than recording a hole in one. And, if players are lucky to have one, they never forget the moment.

Some golfers can’t tell you the age of their children or where they vacationed last. But, ask them if they ever had a hole in one, and they can recite the course, hole, year, club and yardage without hesitation. Some obituaries list holes in one as one of the deceased’s lifetime achievements.

It has been a longtime joke that no employee wants to have a hole in one on the day he told his boss he was going to a funeral.

Of course, professional players are more likely to record a hole in one than amateur players or casual weekend golfers. They are more skilled, more apt to hit the ball at the hole and play countless rounds of golf.

According to usholeinone.com, which insures hole-in-one contests, the odds of getting an ace on a par-3 are 12,500-to-1 for an amateur, 7,500-to-1 for a pro.

But, then, how do you explain local PGA professional Sean Parees having only one hole in one in 44 years of playing and 8-handicap Mo Phanse of Pittsburgh having four aces in 24 years? Or Robert Morris assistant coach Ed Pockl Jr. having one ace in 57 years and Jordan Quinn of Steubenville, Ohio, having two in just eight years of playing?

Luck or skill?

“I think it’s a little of both,” Parees said. “The skill gives you more opportunity because you’re going to hit more close to the hole. And there’s a little bit of luck for it to actually go in.”

Don’t forget the pros — great players have recorded great numbers of aces.

Jack Nicklaus, maybe the greatest golfer of all, has 20 holes in one, though he hasn’t had one in the past nine years.

Gary Player has 19. Arnold Palmer and Tiger Woods each have 18, though Woods (36) is less than half Palmer’s age (82).

Despite the talent and number of shots on the pro tours, it’s not as though holes in one are an everyday commodity.

There were 23 holes in one of the PGA Tour last year compared to 39 in 2010. The Nationwide Tour had 21 aces in 2011, 25 the year before. And the Champions Tour had five each in 2010 and 2011.

There are some outrageous claims of the number of holes in one, too. The North Korean Ministry of Information claims that dictator Kim Jong Il had 11 holes in one — in his first round.

Compare that to the U.S. presidency, where only three — Dwight Eisenhower, Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford — have recorded a hole in one.

Finally there is 1959 Masters champion Art Wall, who had 45 holes in one, including casual rounds, during his PGA Tour playing career.

That’s a lot of lucky bounces.

Nadal, Djokovic advance at Monte Carlo Masters

By JEROME PUGMIRE
The Associated Press

MONACO — Seven-time defending champion Rafael Nadal and top-ranked Novak Djokovic began their clay-court seasons Wednesday with comfortable wins in the second round of the Monte Carlo Masters.

Djokovic opened with a 6-1, 6-4 win against Italian Andreas Seppi, while Nadal followed with a 6-4, 6-3 victory over Finland’s Jarkko Nieminen.

“I played a really normal match, nothing special. Nothing very bad, but nothing very good,” said Nadal, who has 38 straight wins in Monaco, where he is 40-1 all-time. “First match on clay after long time without touching a racket.”

Nadal’s last match was against Jo-Wilfried Tsonga in the Sony Ericsson Open quarterfinals. He pulled out of his semifinal against Andy Murray to get treatment for a knee tendon problem, having skipped a chunk of the season to rest his knees following the Australian Open.

Nadal broke Nieminen’s serve four times, and the Finn had a double-fault on match point.

“I need practice, and today was a good practice,” said Nadal, who next plays Kazakhstan’s Mikhail Kukushkin. “Tomorrow (is) going to be another tough match against a player who is dangerous.”

Since 2005, Nadal has won at Monte Carlo and Roland Garros every year except 2009.

Djokovic took a 4-0 lead after 19 minutes before Seppi rallied in the second set. But Djokovic closed out the match on serve to improve to 7-0 against Seppi.

“I haven’t played a match on a clay court since Roland Garros last year, so I’m happy with how I played,” Djokovic said.

The Australian Open champion next plays Alexandr Dolgoplov of Ukraine, who had 11 aces in his 6-2, 5-7, 6-1 win against Australian Bernard Tomic.

Djokovic says to “expect the unexpected” with Dolgoplov.

“He’s a very talented player, comes up with some shots that are not really typical for a tennis player,” Djokovic said. “He comes up with some drop shots, changes the pace very much. That’s why he’s very dangerous on clay.”

The 23-year-old Dolgoplov is confident of causing an upset. Although he lost in straight sets to Djokovic in the fourth round of last year’s US Open, the Serb had to work hard to take a tight first set 7-6 (14).

“After that, I think I can compete with him,” Dolgoplov said. “I mean, he’s No. 1, I’m No. 21. Obviously, he’s higher in the ranking. He’s playing more consistent. But I think I have my chances.”

Also, Gilles Simon of France beat Frederico Gil of Portugal 6-3, 6-0 and awaited seventh-seeded Janko Tipsarevic of Serbia or Albert Montanes of Spain. Frenchman Julien Benneteau will play Andy Murray in the third round after beating Jurgen Melzer of Austria 6-4, 6-3.

IN THE STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY: Your strength lies in your power of persuasion. Take action and use your intelligence, experience and know-how in a setting or situation that will help you advance. Love is highlighted, and reconnecting with old friends will bring you closer to someone you enjoy spending time with. Your numbers are 7, 13, 19, 23, 35, 39, 46.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put everything you've got into personal gain. Invest in you and what you can do to improve your situation. Don't let anyone deter you from engaging in a project, activity or plan. Taking action will shut down any opposition you face.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't divulge private information if you want your plans to unfold without a hitch. Take care of any loose end that might leave you in a vulnerable position. Observe what everyone around you is doing to avoid being caught off guard.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You'll impress people if you participate in a cause, fundraiser or event you believe in. Your ability to find solutions and formulate a simple plan will help you gain seniority. Don't be surprised if someone is jealous of you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep your thoughts to yourself.

Accept the inevitable. An emotional matter will develop if you or someone you are close to becomes controlling or pushy. Try not to change your mind too often or you will send the wrong impression.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Plan a vacation or get involved in a project, course or apprenticeship that will allow you to expand your mind and improve your lifestyle. Love is on the rise, and discussing your plans with someone special will enhance your relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't get angry, get moving. It's up to you to take control and make things happen. Focus on gathering information and expanding your knowledge and experience through networking and interacting with others. Be prepared when opportunity knocks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Plan to have some fun. Get out with friends you enjoy or people who offer good conversation. Love and romance are highlighted, and no matter what you do, you will attract plenty of attention from your current lover or someone new.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take a timeout to sort out any changes you want to make to your home or family life. Be creative and you will come up with a way to enhance your living arrangements to better suit your personal and professional needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You've got all the moves and ideas to win favors. Communication is the key to getting what you want. Your outgoing nature will bring greater interest from someone who wants to partner with you to reach similar goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Put your money and possessions in a safe place. You stand to lose if you are too trusting. Joint ventures, lending or borrowing are all bad ideas right now. Focus on home and family, and work to secure your position and your future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can turn a good idea into a profitable venture. Don't just talk about your plans; spring into action and get things up and running. Love is in the stars, and a romantic plan should be executed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't take anything or anyone for granted. You are better off doing things on your own. You will be disappointed in someone you thought you could trust. Don't share your personal secrets with anyone. Put your money in a safe place.
